A: You are right in that the link for the zip file is to a server running on port 80 (http), so you need to set up a server on port 8080 (http). There's also a HTTP error about this link not existing. This could be on the same server, or it could be that there's a firewall or something blocking the request. Additionally, as the error message says, the file you are downloading is corrupted. Http downloads are often very large and/or compressed (gzipped). Some browsers will automatically open a download on and cancel it, even if the download is HTTP POST, etc. So, you might just need to find a new download link. [Role of MR imaging in the pre-operative diagnosis of paratesticular tumors: a study of 16 cases]. To assess the diagnostic value of pre-operative MR imaging in paratesticular tumors in comparison to surgical histology. Thirteen patients with a paratesticular lesion detected by a surgical unit and treated by a urological surgeon were included in a retrospective study. All patients underwent MR imaging and the findings were compared with the histological diagnosis after surgery. MR imaging was performed on a 1.5-T unit using a surface coil. The surgical specimen was available in 16 cases and was analysed by a pathologist. Sensitivity and specificity were calculated for conventional imaging (2D and 3D T1-weighted sequences) and for MR imaging (T2-weighted sequences with chemical-shift technique and diffusion-weighted sequences). Diagnostic criteria included signal intensity of the tumour or its anatomical location (retroperitoneal and vascular patterns, fat- and water-depths) and its relationship with the surrounding anatomic structures. Surgical histology revealed eight seminomas and eight non-seminomatous germ-cell tumors. Lesions were located in the spermatic cord and/or epididymis in six cases. Diagnostic accuracy of conventional imaging and MR imaging were respectively: 50 and 100% for seminomas (p 0.05). The gold standard being the histological examination,
